BIG LEAGUE BASEBALL

The big league baseball season which started this week will be featured by the pay of veterans the present war who will be seeking to take up their sports careers where they left off when they changed their baseball uniforms to the fighting uniforms of [illegible] games [illegible] as good as ever.

The great national game plans a big year, with the likelihood of new attendance records.

From time to time we find it advisable to repeat our belief that [illegible] with the [illegible] Branch of the Democratic Party. [illegible] Democrats of the country can [illegible] that our traditional support of it as the party nearest to the [illegible] people, of late we have heard much of "revolts" by first one and then another "wing" of the party. Those "revolts" are usually ironed out by election day, but they serve a useful end in showing that the party is still young and adaptable. Basic principles exist, but each generation [illegible] the right to work out its destiny. Yesterday's platforms are constantly being revised to meet the changed conditions of today. In that process, different groups come forward with human ideals, and the great mass of the party votes for as many principles [illegible] as possible, and to adopt the best program for the present and the future. In this nation, any citizen [illegible] to "ride astride" if he [illegible] people will accept [illegible] it will be rejected. Sometimes this process is [illegible] many of us fear for the result but it is democracy; it is the [illegible] and we [illegible] in it.

TOLERANCE BETWEEN NATIONS

From Peninsula Enterprise

It will take a lot of tolerance for the leading nations in the United Nations Organization to get along together. The United States and Britain may think that Russia is not doing just right in the control it still maintains over the small nations next to its own borders. Russia may say that British and American attempts to [illegible] their independence, and that the United States would demand the right to control many of the island bases it captured in the recent war.

This is an imperfect world, and perfectly action cannot be expected out of all the nations in it. The main thing is to persuade the nations to settle their disputes by peaceful discussion, instead of by the use of military force.

TO SPEED THE PEACE

From Winchester Star

Secretary of State Byrnes' announcement that both Russia and Britain have agreed to a conference of the Big Four foreign ministers in Paris this month is welcome news. It has long since become apparent that the deputies were getting nowhere in their efforts to draft peace settlements with Germany and her European allies. The major issues, it is plain, must be dealt with on a higher level.

In some ways there has been better execution of the job of dealing with the former enemy nations than was the case after World War I. It was a wise decision to prepare the ground for the settlements thoroughly in advance rather than risk repeating the errors of Versailles.

But the settlements cannot be deferred too long without delaying dangerously the return to a stable and peaceful Europe. It is now more than two and a half years since Italy sued for peace and some of the unrest in that country is attributable to the fact that Italy's status is still unsettled. It is only a few weeks short of a year since the surrender of Germany. Until her eastern and western boundaries are finally determined it will be difficult if not impossible to deal with many other pressing problems which the war has left behind.

It is hardly likely that the foreign ministers will be able to reach agreement on all the complex issues in the six days between April 25 and May 1 when the twenty-one nation European peace conference is scheduled to begin. But it is a good thing that the effort is to be made.

...D.NT ROBLEM

From New York Times

On the basis of present figures the National Safety Council estimates that un ase something constructive is done in the matter one of every fourteen persons in the United States will be injured in accidents next year. Frank M. Folsom, executive vice president of the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Council, is confident that the money less will amount to $5,000,000,000, or about the amount required to service the national debt. The over-all effect on reconversion and employment is obvious.

RFC Seeks Large Hole For Its Leftover Scrap

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The reconstruction finance corporation is looking for a hole—say the size of Union station.

It wants to bury 6,000 tons of rapidly deteriorating rubber, fabric and metal left over from the wartime scrap drives. The lease is up on the ground where the scrap is now stored.

One suggestion has been that the RFC just ease the stuff into the Missouri river come the spring floods and let nature take its course.

Reserve Board Is Firm On Installment Buying

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve board opposes any easing, even for veterans, of its present regulation that one-third down must be paid on many articles bought on time, it was disclosed recently contending that it would be inflationary.

The board's views were set out in a letter by Bray Hammond, its assistant secretary, in reply to a communication from the Consumer Banking institute, Washington, which released the correspondence.

He's Prize Donator Of Washington State

PULLMAN, WASH — Charles W. Orton is one of the prize donors of the state of Washington, and it all goes to one place. He recently presented Washington State college with $5,000 for the purchase of paintings by outstanding artists of the state and for other noted works. He previously had donated $20,000

Q.—I have found it difficult to explain to my class why "party" should not be used in the meaning of an individual human being. Will you please discuss this for us?

A.—Primarily, party is a collective noun similar to crowd, group, company, as, a hunting party, a political party, a dinner party, a card party.

Only in legal usage should party designate a single person, as the party to a lawsuit, one of the parties in a divorce action.

Avoid: "He is the party I spoke of." Better: He is the person I spoke of.

Avoid: "A certain party of my acquaintance." Better: An acquaintance (friend) of mine.

The word "individual" literally means "a single entity; that entity cannot be divided," as, society is made up of individuals; a man must be regarded as an individual, and he must accept his individual responsibility.

Therefore, use of individual to designate a specific person is undesirable.

Avoid: "She's a charming individual." Better: She is a charming person (girl, woman).

Of late the word "character" has entered American slang in the meaning of, loosely, any specific person, as: "And so I says to this character, I says, what kinda character do you think I am—a jerk? I says."

While character in the meaning of person is inaccurate, the word may properly be used in designating a person of uncommon or outstanding personality, as Napoleon is a great historic character; the eccentric old man was a local character who was both loved and feared; according to her friends, she was a saintly character.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lessons

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for April 20

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

TWO FRIENDS TALK WITH CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:13-31, 36.

MEMORY SELECTION—They said to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, while he opened to us the scriptures? Luke 24:32.

Fellowship with the risen Christ Lord is the unfailing source of joy and courage. Such certainly was the very essence of our observance of Easter.

We declare with Paul, "That Christ risen from the dead" (I Cor. 15:20), and that He is "declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead" (Rom. 1:4). We would join the apostles who "with great power gave ... witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 4:33).

Come with us as we join two who had become bewildered and felt that all their hopes had been crushed.

We join them as they walk along the road from Jerusalem to Emmaus. Suddenly there is another with the two as they seem to listen to their conversation.

Something is obviously wrong here. These two men are grieved and discouraged. The stranger with them—and He was—asks: "What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?" (v. 17).

I. Chilled Hearts and Sad Words (vv. 13-26).

Teachers will observe that in using the full story in Luke 24.

The two sad men, who had been in Jerusalem to go to Emmaus, were disciples of our Lord, and they just been through the crucifixion experience of seeing Him crucified.

True, there had been reports on the morning of the third day, that the women and the angels (vv. 23, 24). But their hearts were at such low ebb that they could not—or did not—believe.

Their hearts had been chilled by the dreadful things which had taken place.

Eyes closed by unbelief, hearts hindered by doubt and fear, and despondent heart slow to believe—how very effectively do these put the blessing of God and the Word even to the believer! How deeper is the darkness in which the unbeliever finds himself.

II. Warmed Hearts and Restored Faith (vv. 27-32).

Although they did not recognize Him (how slow we are to appreciate blessings!) until after Jesus was gone (v. 32), their hearts burned within them as soon as He began to expound the Scriptures to them.

What a Bible exposition that was! Christ Himself opened all the Scriptures that taught concerning Himself. Bible teachers have talked about this and it makes one's heart burn just to read their suggestions (see, for example, G. Campbell Morgan, Luke, p. 278).

The way to have a burning heart is to read God's Word, or to hear it expounded by a Spirit-filled teacher or preacher.

When the heart has been warmed by the written Word and by fellowship with the living Word, Jesus Himself, the opened eyes of faith follows as day follows night. Now they knew the Stranger who was with them—and He was gone.

How did they know Him? Not because they had seen Him in the days of the bread (v. 30).

Paul declared that saved men are those who, when he said, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (I. Cor. 2:14).

III. Quickened Hearts and Glad Testimony (vv. 33-35).

The seven miles (sixty furlongs) (v. 13) which had passed slowly as they came over were now quickly retraced. They had some good news to bring to the disciples at Jerusalem. How swiftly the feet of the one who has good tidings to bear (see Rom. 10:15).

One wonders why so many professed Christians are so slow in carrying His message. Is it that they do not yet know Christ? For if we know Him we will realize that "we do not need to keep silent in a day of evil tidings (II Kings 7:9).

Note in verse 34 that before they could speak, the others declared the good news of the resurrection. It is proper and delightful that believers share spiritual blessings (Rom. 1:11, 12). That's how we come together in God's House.

Brother in the Lord, Christ, how long is it since you have known and stirring experience of the presence of Christ? Not since something spectacular or unusual but a real deep, stirring experience.

God is the same. Our Lord is the same, yes, even greater. Why should not we go out our Lord and let Him have and quicker our hearts, that then have a revival in our hearts. Let's ask Him for it Easter day.

WORDS TO WATCH

Q.—Why do so many people put the "r" sound in the words "absorb" and "resources"?

A.—Why, indeed? The mispronunciations "absorb" and "resources" may result from false association with words like "observe, result." Whatever the reason, American dictionaries do not sanction the "r" sound, and speakers who are mindful of their accents will wisely avoid the "r," for readers in goodly numbers have written to tell me that they dislike "absorb" and "resources" heartily.

Be sure to use the sanctioned pronunciations: ab-SAWRB and ree-SORE-sez; or, second choice: REE-sore-sez.

In the word "modern," the "r" is often transposed as if the word were spelled "modren," thus: "MOD-run." Conversely, such words as children, hundred, apron are corrupted the other way around, as: "CHILL-dern, HUN-derd, AY-pern."

The pesky "r's" should be kept strictly in their proper places. Be sure to say: MOD-ern, CHILL-dren, HUN-dred, AY-pron.

• • • •

From G. T., East Hickory, Pa.: I was afraid of it. Now it has happened. Contrary to sane reasoning, some old-time savant—arbitrarily ruled that the compound word "epitome" should be pronounced "e-PIT-oh-me" instead of the natural "EP-it-o-me." And pronounce Penelope as "pee-NELL-oh-pee"? I will not!

A.—As I have often observed, English is like that. And as to your own pronunciations, say 'em as you wish, sir, and be proud of your American right of free speech.

• • • •

No place name is of greater importance in the American scheme of things than Honolulu. Despite the fact that we have listened to countless broadcasts from the chief city and capital of the territory of Hawaii (hah-WY-ee), most of us still cling to the out-of-date pronunciation "HAH-nuh-LOO'luh."

The English spelling of Hawaiian is strictly phonetic.

Honolulu is pronounced: HOE-noe-LOO'loo.

Subs May Operate Under Arctic Ice

Navy Working on Scheme to Aid Weather Forecasting.

WASHINGTON — The navy is studying plans for developing submarines capable of penetrating floes to obtain weather data and other information on unexplored Arctic areas, it was learned here.

The proposal calls for construction of large underwater "hourboats" outfitted with retractable conning towers. The smooth topsides of the submarines would allow them to cruise beneath the Arctic ice.

The retractable conning towers, as proposed, would have special heating devices enabling them to melt holes through the ice when they are extended. Crews could then make weather observations and secure other data about ice formations, sea currents and unexplored Arctic regions.

Army, navy, commerce, civil aeronautics board and weather bureau officials have been considering in secret the proposals for development of the new submarines.

From other sources, however, it was learned that the air co-ordinating committee—composed of officials of the five government agencies—is investigating the possibility of using the Arctic exploration two subs that already are under construction at the Philadelphia navy yard.

Some naval officers, however, have expressed the belief that the radically designed submarines should be built from the keel up.

As tentatively planned, the submarines would be located in an area approximately 500 to 600 miles north of Point Barrow, the northernmost tip of Alaska.

Use of the submarines in the Arctic would supplement weather observations and other information on unexplored areas to be obtained by a squadron of 12 army B-29s.

Chief U. S. interest in Arctic-obtained weather information stems from the knowledge that weather on the North American continent originates in areas northwest of Alaska.

Also, army air force officers have pointed out that long-range bombers and future aviation developments are transforming the Arctic waste areas into a new world crossroads—and possibly a new front line of U. S. defense.
